Mr. Miller : Did you have English class today, Akiko?

Akiko : Yes, I did.

Mr. Miller : What did you do?

Akiko : I made a speech. I was nervous because I had to speak English in of my classmates.

Mr. Miller : Oh, I'm sorry I *missed it.

Masao : Me too. I really wanted to hear it. What was your speech about?

Akiko : It was about my dream. I didn't think I was ready, but my English teacher, Mr. Ikeda, said my speech was very good.

Mr. Miller : Did you *prepare it by yourself?

Akiko : Yes, but writing a speech in English was difficult.

Masao : Good job, Akiko. Tell me more about it.

Akiko : So I talked about it in my speech.

Masao : Really? I didn't know that.

Akiko : I thought a lot about my future for the first time when I was preparing the speech. My science teacher, Ms. Sato, is a very good teacher. She is also my *homeroom teacher. She knows a lot of things about science, and she takes good care of her students. I love science, so I want to be a teacher like her.

Masao : Wow, that's great! Everyone likes Ms. Sato.

Mr. Miller : I respect her *professionalism. She always works hard to prepare good classes and *communicate well with students and other teachers. I hope [come / dream / true / will / your], Akiko.

Akiko : Thank you, Mr. Miller. Masao, have you done your speech yet?

Masao : No, but I'll do mine next week.

Akiko : What will you talk about, Masao?

Masao : Well, I'm going to talk about an experience I had at the hospital last week. I didn't think much about my future *until recently. But this experience helped me to think about something I want to do in the future.

Mr. Miller : What *happened?

Masao : My aunt has been in the hospital for about ten days, and I went to see her there last week. I had to wait for her in the waiting room because she was seeing her doctor. I sat next to a little girl and her mother. At first, the mother read a book to the little girl, and she listened. But *after a while, the girl began to C.

Akiko : Was she sick?

Masao : I think she was just very tired. Her mother tried to take care of her, but she kept crying. I wanted to do something for her, but I didn't know what to do. I didn't want to *ignore her, so I drew a picture of some animals on a piece of paper and showed it to her.

Mr. Miller : Did she stop crying then?

Masao : No, she didn't. So I drew one more picture for her, and she finally stopped crying. She said, "Draw some more!" I drew many more pictures to show her. She was happy to see them. After a while, a nurse came to tell me that my aunt was ready to see me, and I started to leave the waiting room. Then the girl looked very sad. So I decided to give her all the pictures. She smiled happily and said, "Thanks! I'll keep all these pretty pictures." Her mother said, "Thank you very much. You are so kind, and your pictures are great."

Mr. Miller : Wow, that's a wonderful story!

Masao : Thank you. I was glad to make someone happy with my pictures.

Akiko : You're very good at art. Do you want to work as an artist?

Masao : I'm thinking about it. Actually, I want to draw pictures for children's books in the future.

Mr. Miller : That's a nice dream. I'm sure your speech will be a great one. By the way, how is your aunt? Is she OK?

Masao : She's fine now, thank you. The doctor says she can come back home next Monday.

Mr. Miller : I'm happy to hear that. Did you tell her that story?

Masao : Not yet. But when I see her next time, I'll tell her what happened at the hospital.

Akiko : I think she'll be glad to hear that you've found your dream.

Masao : I hope so.
